CHAPTER I.

IT was June and a little past sunrise, but there was no hint of early summer freshness in the noxious air of the sleeping car as it toiled like a snail over the infinity of prairie. From behind the green striped curtains of the berths now the sound of restless turning and now a long drawn sigh signified the uneasy slumber due to stifling air and discomfort.

The only passenger stirring was a girl whose youth drooped under the unfavorable influences of foul air, fatigue and a strained anxiety to come to the end of this fatal journey. She had been up while it was yet dark, and her hand luggage, so-keen, strapped and as pitifully new at the art of traveling as the girl herself, clustered about the hem of her blue serge skirt like chicks about a hen. The engine shrieked, but its voice sounded weak and far off in that still ocean of space; the girl tightened her grasp on the largest of the switches and looked at the approaching porter tentatively.

"We're late twenty-fifteen," he reassured her, with the hopeless patience of one who has lost heart in curbing travelers' enthusiasms.

She turned toward the window, a pair of shoulders plainly significant of the burdensome last straw.

"Four days and nights in this train"—they were slower in those days—"and now this extra twenty-five minutes!"

"My dear! My dear!"—head in crimpers was thrust from between the curtains of the section opposite—"I've been awake half the night. I was so afraid I wouldn't see you before you got off."

The head was followed almost instinctively by a hand traveling furtively to the crimpers that gripped the lady's brow like barnacles clinging to a keel.

Mary expressed a grieved appreciation at the loss of rest in behalf of her early departure and conspicuously forbore to glance in the direction of the barnacles, that being a first principle as between woman and woman.

Again the locomotive shrieked, again the girl mechanically clutched the suit case, as presenting the most difficult item in the problem of transportation, and this time the shriek was not an idle formality. The train slowed down; the uneasy sleepers behind the green striped curtains stirred restlessly with the lessening motion of their uncouth cradle. The porter came to help her with the chaste men of one whose hopes of largess are small, the lady with the barnacles called after her redundant farewells, and a moment later Miss Carmichael was standing on the station platform looking helplessly after the train that toiled and puffed, yet seemed, in that crystalline atmosphere, still within arm's reach. She watched it till its floating pennant of smoke was nothing but a gray feather blowing farther and farther out of sight on the flat prairie.

The town—it would be unkink to mention its name—had made merry the night before at the comprehensive invitation of a sheepman who had just disposed of his wool clip and who said, by way of general summons, "What's the use of temptin' the bank?" "Town," therefore, when Mary Carmichael first made its acquaintance, was still sleeping the sleep of the unjust. Those among last night's roisterers who had had to make an early start for their camps were well into the foothills by this time and would remember with exhilaration the cracked tinkle of the dance hall piano as inspiring music when the lonesomeness of the desert menaced and the young blood again clamored for its own.

"Town"—it contained in all some two dozen buildings—was very unlovely in slumber. It sprawled in the lap of the prairies, a grimy faced urchin, with the lines of dismal sophistication writ deep. Yet where in all the "health resorts" of the east did air sweep from the clean hill country with such reviving power? It seemed a glad world of abiding youth. Surely "Town" was but a dreary illusion, a mirage that hung in the unmapped spaces of this new world that God had made and called good, an omen of the abominations that men would make when they grew blind to the beauty of God's world.

Mary Carmichael, with much the feelings of a cat in a strange garret, wandered about the slugged town, and presently the blue and white sign of a telegraph office, with the mythological figure of a bastening messenger, suggested to her that a reassuring telegram was only Aunt Adelaide's due. Whereupon she began to rap on the door of the office a scared pianissimo, which naturally had little effect on the operator, who was at home and asleep some three blocks distant. But the west is the place for woman if she would be waited upon. No 7 to 1 ratio of the sexes has tempered the chivalry of her sons of the saddle. A loitering something in a sombrero saw rather than heard the rapping, and, at the sight, went in quest of the dreaming operator without so much as embarrassing Miss Carmichael with an offer of his services. And presently the operator, whose official day did not begin for some two hours yet, appeared, much disheveled from running and the cursory nature of his toilet, prepared to receive a message of life and death.

The wire to Aunt Adelaide ran:

Practically at end of journey. Take stage to Lost Trail this morning. Am well. Don't worry about me. MARY.

And the telegraph operator, dimly remembering that he had heard Lost Trail was a "pizen mean country" and that it was tucked some 200 miles back in the foothills, did not find it very hard to forgive the girl who was "practically at end of journey," particularly as the dimple had come out of hiding and he had never been called upon to telegraph the word "practically" before. He was a progressive man and liked to extend his experiences.

After sending the telegram, Miss Carmichael drew from her pocket a square envelope of heavy Irish linen, a little worn from much reading, but primarily an envelope that bespeaks elegance of taste on the part of her correspondent, and read:

Lost Trail, Wyo.

My Dear Miss Carmichael—Pray let me assure you of my gratification that the preliminaries have been so satisfactorily arranged and that we are to have you with us by the end of June. The children are profiting from the very anticipation of it, and it will be most refreshing to all us isolated ones to be able to welcome an eastern girl as a member of our family.

Although the long journey across the continent by train, particularly to one who has not made it before, I hope you may not find it utterly fatiguing. Please remember that after leaving the train it will be necessary to take a stage to Lost Trail. If it is possible, I shall meet you with the buckboard at one of the stage stations: otherwise, keep to the stage route, being careful to change at Dax's ranch.

Unfortunately the children vary so in their accomplishments that I fear I can make no suggestions as to what you may need to bring with you in the way of text books, but I hope you will find them in good ground.

I had a charming letter from Mrs. Kirkland, who said the pleasantest things possible of you. I am glad the wife of our senator was able conscientiously to command us.

With our most cordial good wishes for a safe journey, believe me, dear Miss Carmichael, sincerely yours,

SARAH YELLET.

In the meantime "Town" came yawning to breakfast. It was not so prankish as it had been the night before, when it accepted the sheepman's broad gauge hospitality and made merry till the sun winked from behind the mountains. It made its way to the low, shedlike eating house with a pre-breakfast solemnity bordering on sullenness. Not a petticoat was in sight to offset the spurs and sombreros that filed in to breakfast from every point of the compass, prepared to eat primitive, joke broadly and quarrel speedily if that sensitive and often inconsistent something they called honor should be brushed however lightly.

But the eternal feminine was within, and, discovering it, the temper of "Town" was changed. It ate self consciously, made jokes meet for the ears of ladies and was more interested in the girl in the sailor hat than it was in remembering old feuds or laying the foundations of new.

In its interior aspect the eating house conveyed no subtle invitation to eat, drink and be merry. On the contrary, its mission seemed to be that of confounding appetite at every turn. A long, shedlike room it was, with walls of unpainted pine still sweating from the ax. Festoons of scalloped paper in conflicting shades hung from the ceiling, a menace to the taller of the guests. On the rough walls some one, either prompted by a latent spirit of aestheticism or with an idea of abetting the town toward merrymaking, an encouragement it hardly required, had tacked posters of shows, mainly representing the tank and sawmill school of drama.

Miss Carmichael sat at the extreme end of the long oilcloth covered table, on which a straggling army of salt and pepper shakers, catchup bottles and divers commercial condiments seemed to pause in a discouraged march. A plague of flies was on everything, and the food was a threat to the hardest appetite. One man summed up the steak with, "You got to work your jaw so hard to eat it that it ain't fair to the next meal."

His neighbor heaved a sigh. "This here formation, whatever it be"—and he turned the meat over for better inspection—"do shore remind me of an undestructible doll that an old maid aunt of mine giv' my sister when we was kids. That doll sort of challenged me, an' one day I ups an' has a chaw at her. She war undestructible, all right. Fore I concluded my sperments I had left a couple of teeth in her."

"Well, I cards the steaks an' draw to a pair of aces." And the first man helped himself to a couple of biscuits.

Miss Carmichael knew, by the continual scraping of chairs across the gritty floor, that the places at the table must be nearly all taken, and, while she anticipated, with an utterly unreasonable terror, any further invasion of her seclusion at the end of the table, still she could not persuade herself to raise her eyes to detect the progress of the enemy, even in the interest of the diary she had kept so conscientiously for the past three days, which was something of a loss to the diary, as those untamed, manly faces were well worth looking at. Reckless they were in many instances and sometimes the lines of hardship were cruelly writ across young faces that had not yet lost the down of adolescence, but there were humor and endurance and the courage that knows how to make a crony of death and get right good sport from the comradeship. Their faults were the faults of lusty, red blooded youth, and their virtues the open handed generosity, the ready sympathy of those uncertain titlers at life who ride or fall in the tourney of a new country.

At present the "yearling," drinking her execrable coffee in an agony of embarrassment, weighed heavily on their minds. They would have liked to rise as a man and ask if there was anything they could do for her. But as a glance toward the end of the table seemed to increase her discomfiture tenfold, they did the kindest and the most difficult thing and looked in every direction but Miss Carmichael's. With a delicacy of perception that the casual observer might not have given them credit for they had refrained from taking seats directly opposite her or those immediately on her right, which, as she occupied the last seat at the table, gave her at least a small degree of seclusion.

As one after another of them came filing in, bronzed, rugged, radiating a beauty of youth and health that no sketchy exigence of apparel could obscure, some one already seated at the table would put a foot on a chair opposite him and send it spinning out into the middle of the floor as a hint to the newcomer that was that was his reserved seat, and the cow puncher, sheep herder, prospector or man about town, as the case might be, would take the hint and the chair, leaving the petticoat separated from the sombreros by a tableland of oilcloth and a

Killed by Fast Passenger.

Jeffersonville, Ind., Oct. 9.—Daniel Stepp, fifty-eight years old, was instantly killed by being hit by a fast passenger train.

Caught Over the Line.

Conneaut, O., Oct. 10.—The United States revenue cutter Morrill captured the American fish tug Valiant of Erie, off this port while, according to the statement of the captain of the Morrell, the tug was several miles across the Canadian line.

A BATTLE ROYAL

Fight For Control of Wabash Railway Is on to the Finish.

GOULD IS CONFIDENT

His Friends Predict That He Will Not Only Gain Control But That Ramsey Will Be Wiped Out.

Mr. Ramsey Declines to Make Predictions But Is Outwardly Calm and Confident.

Toledo, Oct. 10.—George J. Gould arrived in Toledo late yesterday afternoon, ready for the annual meeting of the Wabash railroad, which is to be held today. Joseph Ramsey, Jr., ex-president of the road, the former friend and present antagonist of Mr.

Gould, was one of the best known men along Broadway in his day. His father, who was Judge Raplee of Yates county, N. Y., left him a large fortune, in 1856 he opened a banking house at 137 Broadway, which was capitalized at $200,000 and did a yearly business of $500,000, which was a large sum at that time. Since 1867, when this bank made an assignment after some unfortunate speculation, Mr. Raplee's fortune, although invested in a new banking venture, steadily diminished. Three years ago he closed his last offices at 136 Liberty street and began to live on the remnants of his former wealth. He was unmarried.

Mr. Raplee, carrying a dress-suit case, entered the office of the superintendent of the outdoor poor, who is an old acquaintance of the banker, and who greeted him, saying:

"What can I do for you, Jefferson?"

"I have only one friend left," said Mr. Raplee, "but he won't help me any more, and I've got to live."

The superintendent had a messenger escort the former banker to the farm colony at Staten Island, where he will be given some light employment for the remainder of his life.

AWAITING ROYAL SIGNATURES

Peace Treaty Now in Its Final Stage of Efficiency.

Washington, Oct. 10.—The treaty of peace between Russia and Japan will become effective upon its approval without waiting the formal exchange of ratifications at Washington. This information has been imparted at the Japanese legation. This course has been decided upon that the speediest possible termination of the war may be had. The treaty, it is understood, has passed through the necessary preliminary stages of approval in each country and is now before the respective emperors of Japan and Russia for the royal signature. As soon as it has been signed this will be communicated by cable to the state department at Washington and the Washington government will apprise each emperor of the act of the other. With this accomplished the war will be at an end.

Mr. Gould himself declined to discuss the probable outcome of the meeting, but his friends consistently predict that he will not only retain control of the Wabash system by an overwhelming majority of votes, but that when the smoke of battle has cleared away it will be found that not only has Mr. Ramsey failed to gain control of the system, but that he has been removed from it entirely, and that his name does not even appear in the new board of directors.

Karlsbad Agreement Accepted.

Christiania, Oct. 10.—After two days spent in excited discussion the strophing proceeded to a division on the proposal of the Republican minority to submit the Karlstad agreement concerning the dissolution of the union between Norway and Sweden to a referendum.

The proposal was rejected by a vote of 109 to 8. The agreement was then accepted by a vote of 101 to 16. This is a great victory for the government.

Negro Runs Amuck.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 10.—Wild with rage because of the ridicule of several small boys in front of the Bijou theater on Main street last night, an unbroken negro emptied his revolver into a mass of people. One boy is dying, another is dangerously wounded and a negro girl received slight injuries. The negro escaped.

Lineman Has Charmed Life.

Terra Haute, Ind., Oct. 10.—Lineman Little, aged twenty-six, fell forty-seven feet from a pole to the pavement after receiving 2,000 volts of electricity from a live wire, and escaped without serious injury.

TERRE TELEGRAMS

Baron Fejevary has been reappointed premier of Hungary.

Complete order has been restored by the police and military patrols at Moscow.

The thirty-first annual convention of the American Bankers' association is in session at Washington.

A tugboat ran down a fruit sellers' punt in the Danube near Budapest. Fourteen women were drowned.

Fire destroyed over $100,000 worth of lumber in the yard of the N. Ludington company at Marinette, Wis.

John R. McLean, owner of the Cincinnati Enquirer, has purchased an even half interest in the Washington Post company.

One workman was killed and five were perhaps fatally injured by the fall of a girder in the old county building at Chicago.

However, at a conference held between Mr. Ramsey and his attorneys, it was decided in view of the decision of Judge Taylor, to abandon the right of the three men who have for several years acted as judges of election at the annual meetings of the Wabash railroad.

Hughes Don't Want It.

New York, Oct. 10.—Charles E. Hughes, the legislative insurance inquisitor, who was nominated by the Republicans for mayor of Greater New York Thursday night, has declined the nomination.

Dekoven Hall.

Dekoven Hall, the main dormitory of St. John's military academy at Dekoven, Wis., was destroyed by fire, the loss being estimated at about $30,000.

The strike situation at Monterey, Mex., remains practically unchanged. The firemen refuse to work unless their requests are conceded by the Mexican Central railroad.

BANKER'S DOWNFALL

Former Associate of Gould and Vanderbilt in Poorhouse.

New York, Oct. 10.—Jefferson P. Raplee, once a wealthy New York banker and business associate of Jay Gould, Commodore Vanderbilt and John P. Blair, has gone to the poorhouse here.

Raplee was one of the best known men along Broadway in his day. His father, who was Judge Raplee of Yates county, N. Y., left him a large fortune, in 1856 he opened a banking house at 137 Broadway, which was capitalized at $200,000 and did a yearly business of $500,000, which was a large sum at that time. TUESDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1905.

SURE enough it was Pat Crowe and he is now in jail at Omaha awaiting trial. Pat made himself famous when he kidnapped Eddie Cudahy and for his return was paid $25,000 by the boys' father who had the money to spare, a fact that Pat knew in advance.

A WEEK or two ago a party of the Princeton city schools gave a spelling test in the high school rooms there. He found them decidedly lacking in their ability to spell correctly. Fifty-four of the 120 pupils in the high school misspelled the word "business" and over one hundred missed the word "silence". Numerous other words of common usage were missed by a majority of them. After that a challenge went out for a spelling match. The high school pupils and their teachers were anxious to put the parents to test. The parents responded and the spelling bee was held. The result was that the high school students and their teachers went down before the business, professional and laboring men who stood up and spelled as they did in their school days. This test should bring some good results, not only at Princeton but out over the state.

Automobile Accident

Last Saturday night while Joe Robertson and Harry Murphy were returning in the former's automobile to Brownstown from attending a lodge at Kurtz they came near being in a serious accident. They were coming at full speed and about nine miles from Brownstown ran into some rails which had either been accidentally or purposefully thrown across the road. Neither Robertson or Murphy were hurt but the machine was completely ruined.

Best One Yet.

The "Royal Chef" is full of real laughter and merriment, beautiful music, and splendid spectacular effects. As to its production, it is a blaze of glory in its costumes and brilliant colors, full of catchy melodies, ridiculous situations, and humorous dialogue fit with precision. The music is by Ben Jerome, a composer well and favorably known and song hits are numerous. The cast is an excellent one. At Opera House Thursday evening of this week.

New Law Firm.

Attorneys S. A. Barnes and U. F. Lewis have formed a partnership for the practice of law and will have their offices in the Pfaffenberger block. Both are good lawyers and each one has a good practice. This will make a strong firm.

Do Not Move.

Republicans should remember that they can not move from one ward to another between now and November 7, the date of the city election, without losing their vote. Therefore any republican who contemplates moving should delay that until after the election.

Dinner Party

At dinner Sunday Henry Reber entertained about fifty of his friends at his home on Central Avenue. They came from all parts of the surrounding country and enjoyed a very fine dinner and spent a pleasant day.

Arthur H. DeGolier started to drive to the country this morning with a carriage load of prospective farm purchasers. As he started out High street near the Blish mill the liver team he was driving, took fright and started to run. They dashed against a tree and some of the men were thrown out receiving some painful bruises.

DIED A MARTYR

Doctor Who Fought Yellow Fever Succumbs to It.

New Orleans, Oct. 10.—A martyr in the fight against yellow fever, Dr. C. M. Shanley, formerly of North Dakota, is dead at his plantation home on Bayou Barataria as the result of a relapse from yellow fever, his illness extending over the past two weeks. Dr. Shanley came here with his family about three years ago from the Northwest. When the fever appeared in New Orleans he refused to leave, and when it developed on Bayou Barataria he volunteered his services to assist in stamping it out, and for days and nights visited and ministered to the sick. Several weeks ago he was himself stricken and was brought to the city and taken to the emergency hospital. He remained there until he believed himself cured and immediately returned to the bayou to resume his work. Exposure and the fact that he had ventured out too soon resulted in a fresh attack of illness, from which death came. Dr. Shanley was a 32d degree Mason and his body will be buried today from the Masonic Temple with high Masonic honors.

MAJOR DARNELL

Some of the officials and prominent citizens here called my attention to what Vinol had accomplished for them, and induced me to give it a trial. I must confess that it certainly worked wonders for me. It was delicious to take and did not upset my stomach like oil preparation cod liver oil and emulsion; it gave me a hearty appetite, cured my stomach trouble and strengthened and invigorated my entire system. I wish every sick person in Seymour would try this great cod liver oil preparation, Vinol." J. S. Darnell Mayor of Frankfort, Ky.

Mr. Peter of the W. F. Peter Drug Co. says, "The above letter is perfectly genuine, and we endorse all Mayor Darnell says. We guarantee Vinol to increase the appetite, cure stomach troubles, renew the vitality of the aged, build up the run down, tired and debilitated, make the weak strong, cure chronic coughs, colds and build up the convalescent, or we will return to the purchaser every dollar paid for it." W. F. Peter Drug Co.

BROCHER CHURCH

Our school is progressing nicely. Born to August Rotert and wife, Monday, October 2, a girl.

Ray Baumgart attended the conference at Louisville last week.

Martin Hulker and his sisters, Clara and Ida, of Columbus, and ye scribe and brother visited John Baute and family Sunday.

Will Popenhaus, of Waymansville, and Henry Harlowe and son, Walter and wife went to Kansas last week to visit relatives and friends.

Miss Martha Schneider who has been staying in the family of Rev. Baumgart has returned to her home at Brownstown.

Samuel Anderson traded a span of mules to Wm. Baute one day last week.

Mrs. John Baute and children who have spent three weeks with relatives returned to their home at Waymansville.

Rev. Gerkensmeyer, of this place, went to Ohio last week to visit relatives and friends.

FOR MORE TREES

Preparations Making For a General Observance of Indiana Arbor Day.

PEOPLE ARE INTERESTED

Much Attention Has Lately Been Given to This Important Subject Throughout the State.

Particularly in the Public Schools Will the Day, October 20, Be Observed.

Indianapolis, Oct. 10.—When Governor Hanly issued his Arbor Day proclamation in the spring setting apart a day in April for the observance of the day, he likewise appointed October 20 as a day for tree planting. The recent attention that has been attracted to arboriculture in Indiana has given many people a new interest in this subject, and it is understood that the coming date will be observed very generally throughout the state. Particularly is this true of the public schools, in most of which preparations are even now making for the proper observance of the day.

DAMAGES DEMANDED

Mine Operator Sued by Hotel Girl for Breach of Promise.

Terre Haute, Ind., Oct. 10.—Harper & Kelley, Terre Haute lawyers, have brought suit in Vermillion county for Hattie Leahy against John Shirkle for $10,000 for breach of promise. Shirkle is a coal operator and member of a family prominently connected with the mining industry for many years. He lives in Clinton, where the young woman had been employed in a hotel.

She alleges in her complaint that under promise of marriage she traveled through the West with him, and that she did so on his promise that while in the West the ceremony would be performed. She says that he introduced her as his wife to all whom they met. His excuse for postponing the marriage was that he was interested in the ownership of a mine with his mother and did not want to anger her before the mine was sold.

The mine has since been sold, and Miss Leahy alleges Shirkle is to be held responsible for his promise. The mine was sold to a man who had been employed in the touch of it. Still more unpleasant is the thought that half the feminine sex who dwell in towns and cities are just like her. They merely sit around and get fat. What are our muscles supposed to be for? Is a woman's body a mere mass of useless pulp?

Lately I saw it mentioned in praise of a certain millionaire woman that there is "not a trace of snobishness about her." There never is any snobishness about any well bred person or any affection or tendency to patronize those who are poorer. That disposition belongs to the half breed.

Men are such cowards," said a woman who shot and wounded a big burglar from whom her husband and another man ran away and hid.

Don't begin to die thirty years before you have to go. Look steadily forward to living a long time and to being active, useful and helpful to the world to the last. Never pay any attention to your age; never celebrate your birthdays and forget that you have any. Never groan over or enlarge on your physical ailments; never mention them at all except to your doctor, and then only when you are forced to do so. Live them down. And begin now, whether you are seventeen or seventy.

A pretty young woman moved into a flat in a new neighborhood. The apartment house was tenanted by several of those pests to society—idle women who constitute themselves the inquisitors and censors of everybody around them. The pretty young woman's husband is on the staff of a morning newspaper, his work requiring him to be at his office nearly all night. The tabbies heard him come home morning after morning at 3 and 4 o'clock. What could a respectable man do that kept him out all night? The tabbies held a council of war. They must know whom the landlord was harboring in the midst of them. Finally one rang Mrs. Blank's bell and said, "Is Mr. Blank your husband?" "He is," replied the pretty young woman. "Well, we have noticed that he comes in always very late at night. Now, would you mind telling me what your husband's business is?" "He's a burglar," promptly answered Mrs. Blank and shut the door.

Another fetching jacket has a sort of yoke which extends down the front to the bottom, and all the rest is laid in plaits, which reach out over the hips and are held in by self belt. This also has coat sleeves made full at the top. The yoke goes straight across the back about six inches in depth. All the rest is plaited and belted. A skirt of the same material has a stitched strap about six inches from the bottom, but not meeting at the front by three inches.

Another unusually stylish suit has the skirt stitched in circles of three lines all around. The jacket is short, with reefer front, double breasted, with smoke pearl buttons. A cunning little pocket of tartan plaid is set on one side and a pointed strap is stitched up the right side to the bust line. The sleeves are like the others mentioned, with a tiny flap of the plaid. Down the front is a line of wool fringe carrying all the colors in the plaid, set directly on the edge. The small collar is flat and there is a deep hood of the plaid bordered with the fringe. This is produced in dark blue and also in brown and in a Scotch mixture. Empire cloaks are seen, but are not remarkable for their beauty. The semolina coat is much liked, cut like a man's and three-quarter length.

Feminine Snapshots

What Are a Woman's Muscles For?

The other day a pretty girl was telling of new admirer recently added to her string. She liked him and said: "He isn't a bit like that Nancy man who is always taking medicine—the one we call 'Camper Bottle,' you know. This one swims, cycles, rides horseback, plays athletic games and does all the other things a man ought to do." Things a man ought to do! There was this girl, a young woman, with fat already accumulating around her body and unsightly lumps of fat gathering at the back of her neck and shoulders and pitching her head forward like a stiff old woman's. Ere long this strapping fat will infiltrate all the splendid muscles of her handsome body so that she cannot turn her neck or even stoop over comfortably. She takes no exercise at all and eats three hearty meals a day. She declares even now that it hurts her heart to walk much. She says a mere step of a mile tires her and lame her feet now, when she ought any morning to be able to start off with a long, free stride and cover ten miles without any fatigue at all. She cannot cycle, swim, row, play golf, walk or do any of the things a woman—no less than a man—ought to do if she would preserve in good condition the splendid body which is her instrument for use. If the girl had even good, solid housework to do it would be exercise in abundance, but she is not obliged to do this, unfortunately. Her whole body is as soft and "squishy" as a plate of stewed pumpkin. There is something unpleasant in the touch of it. Still more unpleasant is the thought that half the feminine sex who dwell in towns and cities are just like her. They merely sit around and get fat. What are our muscles supposed to be for? Is a woman's body a mere mass of useless pulp?

Revival of Black Cashmere.

There are some browns and many grays, but there will be a great vogue for all the purple and heliotrope shades.

Black also will have a rare prominence, and many of the black dresses and suits are truly beautiful, with fine jetted trimming and delicate but effective tracery of black silk embroidery.

In one suit I noticed a very original and handsome arrangement. The gown was of fine black cashmere, and this will be much seen in almost every range of indoor and outdoor wear.

SURVEYORS

Are Coming This Way From Jeffersonville.

MERCHANTS ACT

Will Welcome the Visit of National Editorial Association.

The Louisville Courier Journal says that a surveying corps of ten men are now working north from Jeffersonville running the preliminary lines for an electric road to Seymour which the Louisville & Southern Indiana Traction Company is said to be planning. The road will likely parallel the Pennsylvania most of the way. On account of the Forest Reservation at Henryville it is almost certain that the line will keep in sight of the Pennsylvania that far at least, which is nineteen miles out of Jeffersonville. From there north to Underwood the country is rather rough and the surveyors may find a better route farther away from the steam road. From Underwood north to Seymour the country is generally level. It seems to be the purpose of these people to connect with the Irwin line at Seymour.

The surveyors employed by the Irwins are coming this way from Columbus on the west side of the river. A route on the east side will also be surveyed. Louis H. Wright, of Jonesville, and Harry Scholler of Edinburg, will follow the engineer corps, securing right of way options from farmers and land owners. It is conceded now that the Irwins are in earnest and that they mean to extend their line to Seymour. A news special from Columbus states contracts for the grading and building of the bridges will all be made yet this fall.

The Merchants Association through its secretary received a communication from the secretary of the committee setting forth the plans being made for the itinerary and the same was discussed at a meeting Monday night. The merchants looked with favor on the arrangements and authorized the secretary to so report.

A visit from the National Editorial Association to this city is one in which all our citizens should be interested.

TRAGEDY AT FUNERAL

Cousins Fight and One Is Slain at Uncle's Grave.

Bowling Green, Ky., Oct. 10.—A tragedy occurred on the banks of Green river at Honaker's Ferry. At the grave of their uncle, John Phelps attacked John Honaker, his brother, inflicting seven wounds with a knife, when John Honaker drew his pistol and shot Phelps through the heart. The men were first cousins, being nephews of the late P. M. Honaker, a wealthy banker, who died recently.

The trouble is said to have grown out of the settlement of the estate. Masonic services were being held at P. M. Honaker's grave and 400 people were present and saw the tragedy enacted.

SEEING AMERICA.

Wonderful Scenic Trip Across Rocky Mountains to Oregon Exposition.

In certain respects the excursions to the Lewis and Clark Centennial Exposition, Portland, Oregon, via Pennsylvania Lines, beginning May 23rd and continuing through the summer, offer advantages never before presented to Exposition visitors. The trip to the Oregon Exposition, in addition to the attractiveness of the extensive exhibits, includes the journey through the scenic wonderland of the Rocky Mountains and the Cascade Range, and what American has not looked forward from the days of the geography class in school to the time when those great sights should be seen in reality? The time was never so favorable as now. The trip may be made less expensive than ever. For only a slight difference in fare tourists may extend their trip to San Francisco and Los Angeles. The return trip may be made over a different route, enabling travelers to view much more of the west. For full particulars, fares, dates of special excursions to Portland on account of conventions, through time and passenger service apply to ticket agent of Pennsylvania Lines.
